HOMEOWNERS SHERYL AND TIM WILLIAMS, A SAVVY CONNECTICUT couple with a shared love for modern architecture, decided to make South Florida their permanent residence — but they didn't share the same vision. "I wanted to be on the water and Tim wanted to be on the golf course," Sheryl says. She describes her waterfront dream home as "an elegant northern beach house similar to those in Nantucket," — not exactly what one would expect to find bordering a sub-tropical golf course.

In the elegant living room, a pair of ebony-vitrines flank a limestone mantle, where Memories, an original installation of light wood sculptures by German artist Christian Burchard, makes a striking impression.

Tim's passion for golf course living led the couple to Old Palm Golf Club in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., where they viewed homes designed by prominent Delray Beach architect Randall Stofft. They soon retained him to create their first custom-built home. Lorraine Rogers-Bolton, a much sought-after interior designer who has worked with Stofft, completed the creative team.

Stofft decided to create a transitional design for the home. "Because the clients wanted something more modern," he says, "the architecture created here is really my contemporary interpretation on a more traditional house."

A view of the 9,800-square-foot estate from the exterior is an architectural tour de force. Poolside, Brown Jordan lounge chairs invite relaxation flanked by two huge concrete urns that pay tribute to the home's regal scale. While the pool serves as the colorful centerpiece, the panorama incorporating the golf course background translates to pure artistry.

The loggia is a favorite spot for the family to socialize while seated on dark rattan furnishings upholstered in Sunbrella, or on swivel barstools from Brown Jordan that pull up to the bar. A limestone-topped occasional table from David Sutherland adds interest to the neutral palette atop a weather-resistant raffia area rug.

Indoors, 12-foot-high ceilings in the formal dining room lend an airy feel above a table framed with side chairs covered in Beacon Hill twill, and host chairs from Hickory Chair. Powder blue walls are offset with custom shelving that displays Sheryl's collection of China.

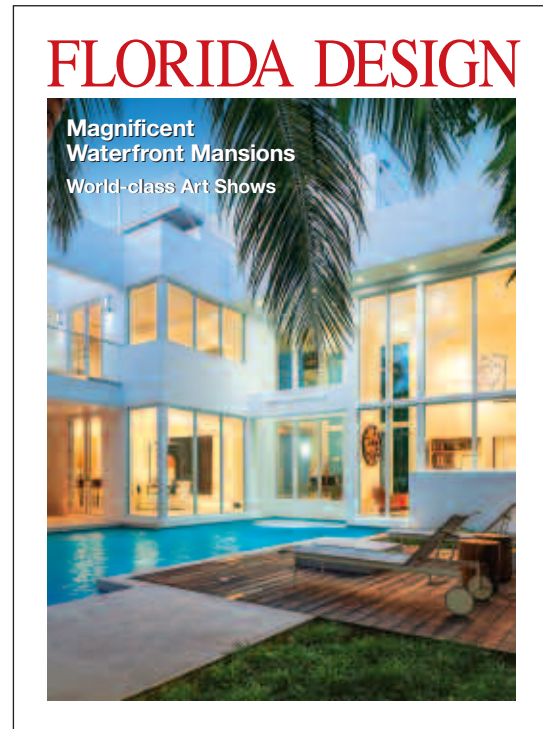

Upon entering the crisp living room, a sofa clad in white-linen and a pair of informal benches upholstered in Hodsoll McKenzie velvet lend a northern beach house feel.

Nearby is the loggia, an outdoor living area with an indoor-outdoor, two-sided fireplace that invites conversation while seated on a rattan sofa and loveseat from Walter's Wicker. Fanation fans from Cordesign provide a cool breeze from above.

Sited to maximize golf course and water views, the home fulfills both the Williams' visions. For Tim, contemporary architecture overlooks the golf course with 360-degree views, and for Sheryl, an ocean-blue and white palette, along with art and personal collections, resembles a northern beach house. It also offers the ultimate in comfort for the couple's family and friends.
